

Pico Rivera Turns Down Gambling Bill

The Pico Rivera City Council Monday night unanimously rejected a proposal to license card games and establish gambling permits in the city.

The proposed ordinance was submitted to the council by Dominic Distaso, a resident, who told the council that licensed gambling would bring the city an estimated yearly revenue of $100,000.

A similar request by Distaso and two other men, Frank and Anthony Barnese, was turned down recently by the Walnut City Council.