

Poker Players Get 2nd Cabazon Casino

Poker playing addicts of the area have a second legal parlor to visit in nearby Cabazon now.

A casino, known as "El Cid," swung open its doors last week.

The new casino is located in the same building that at one time housed a $250,000 Gardena-type poker hall, known as the "Little Casino."

The "Little Casino" failed to attract enough customers to pay the freight, and closed its doors in December, 1958, after a mysterious fire, with a reported loss of $590,400.

The location of the new hall is only a short distance from the town's city hall, where the city council agreed last May, on a split vote, to approve issuing of a second license.

The Desert Sands Casino, which also originally operated at the site of the old "Little Casino," has since moved its location to the foot of the off-ramp of Interstate 10.

The new parlor is licensed to Frank Barnese, a Pico Rivera bowling alley operator, and Edward Roban, a retired Covina fireman.
